

Office of the President

A Message from

President Adela de la Torre, Ph.D.

Dear SDSU Community,

We are elated to share that last week's Immigration and Customs Enforcement-issued policy, which would have restricted the ability of certain international students to study in the United States, was rescinded today by the Trump administration. We are pleased with this outcome.

As members of a global community, we strongly support our international students, as well as faculty and staff born and raised around the globe. Today's decision comes after nationwide criticism and planned litigation, including a lawsuit the California State University system jointly filed, opposing the updated guidelines. Such a policy was unrealistic and problematic, and would have significantly hampered the teaching and research missions of public higher education across the nation, including our own.

Next Steps for Our International Students

Earlier, we asked all of our international students to respond to a survey so that we could quickly assess how best to support them.

If you are a continuing student you no longer need to complete the survey. With the policy rescinded, our expectation is that we will be able to welcome you back to classes according to our SDSU Flex plan guidelines.

If you are a new incoming freshman or transfer student, please complete the survey as soon as possible, if you have not done so already. SDSU Global Affairs will continue to work closely with all incoming international students to meet their educational planning needs for Fall 2020.

Please look for and carefully read all forthcoming emails from SDSU Global Affairs, which will provide more specific instructions for your unique situation to ensure you are supported and confident to move forward with your academic goals. If you have any questions, please contact the International Student Center by emailing iscreception@sdsu.edu.

Next Steps for Our Campus

Faculty have drafted a resolution, which will go before the University Senate later this month, to pledge solidarity and offer continued support for our international students.

SDSU Global Affairs and many across campus have worked quickly and diligently to identify solutions for our international students so they can remain connected and continue their studies and research. We will continue to provide guidance to our international students.

With Gratitude

As a campus community, we remain proud of our SDSU global family, which is far more vibrant and engaging because of our nearly 1,800 international students. Each of you are an integral part of our SDSU family and meaningfully enhance our community through your unique lived realities, perspectives, and intellectual curiosity you bring to the lab and to the classroom.

Special gratitude goes to the entire Global affairs team and the many campus members who have worked tirelessly to support our international students. Today, we celebrate this victory together.

Adela de la Torre, Ph.D.
San Diego State University President

Cristina Alfaro, Ph.D.
Interim Associate Vice President for Global Affairs